BELL INN HOTEL

Your Wedding Venue

The Bell Inn, historically an important stop on the Great North Road between London and York, is one of the finest surviving examples of a 17th Century Coach House in the country. Famous as the Birthplace of Stilton Cheese this popular Inn lies at the heart of the village.

Legend has it that, whilst a fugitive, Dick Turpin the Highwayman resided at the Bell Inn for nine weeks before bursting from his bedroom window and on to the back of Black Bess to gallop away up the Great North Road when surprised by the law.

More recently renovations completed in 1990 have restored the Bell Inn to its former glory of days gone by. Built around the old courtyard our reception facilities and bedrooms have been skillfully blended into the ageless stonework offering old world charm, relaxing comfort and the most modern of facilities.

Today, the Bell Inn offers the same old-fashioned standards of comfort and a good humoured, efficient service that was the hallmark of all the famous coaching houses in their 17th Century heyday. The historic setting will set the seal for your special day.

A friendly and warm welcome greets you from the moment you step through our glass fronted archway in to the beautiful historic surroundings. From your initial enquiry, to the day itself, our highly dedicated team will guide you through the months, weeks and days ahead of your wedding to ensure your perfect day flows seamlessly.
